Vito Ippolito
FIM President

The SPEA FIM Trial World Championship will enter the 2010 season with great expectations. It has enjoyed 35 years of existence since the first FIM World Championship held in 1975. This 2010 season which is about to start is a very important one for various reasons. Trial is a very specific motorcycle sport and in terms of motorcycle market it represents a very small part of the whole motorcycle sport, hit by the current economic crisis. Another difficult situation concerns the general practice of Trial riding which is facing political problems due to environmental restrictions such as access to off-road and sound levels. The FIM will continue its work together with the manufacturers and the organisers of Trial rounds, as well as on the political side, with actions at international and national levels.

There are positive aspects as well though, with good perspectives for this 2010 season, in particular the extension of television coverage. This competition will reach a huge global audience across five continents, giving a great platform to all the people involved: FIM, organisers, sponsors, teams and riders for the promotion of this sport.

The competition of Trial is very different from all other motorcycling sports. It is the only one in which the most important factor is not the speed, but the ability and skills of the riders while crossing obstacles. Born as "observed Trials" more than a century ago, Trial has been the subject of particular attention from the FIM in recent years. Other competitions have been created: the FIM Junior Trial World Cup, the FIM Trial Youth Cup (for riders between 16 and 18 years) and the FIM Women's Trial World Championship which was the first female Series at world level in the motorcycling sport. The FIM Trial des Nations – for men and women – is a successful competition, with more and more participants every year. This means the sport is a good attraction for riders, teams, the industry and the public.

We have to adapt ourselves to the evolution of the world but we also have to defend our interests. Each participant, each person involved in the sport of Trial, must collaborate in this work. It is a difficult task which will take a lot of effort. The future of our sport depends on this work.

TRIAL AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Trial, like all other off-road motorcycling disciplines, is threatened by the most extremist defenders of the environment. To face these attacks, all Trial actors such as the organisers, riders and the public must be mobilised and show in a visible manner a respect of the environmental rules created by the FIM.

For every rider and the public, the organisers provide identified containers for every type of waste and sanitary facilities that all must use.

The riders must use under their motorcycle, in the Paddock, an “environmental” mat that must be impermeable to protect the soil from hydrocarbon seepage. The motorcycles must be washed in an appropriate place provided by the organiser and equipped with an oil separator.

The public will respect the instructions regarding the respect of the environment given by the organiser. They will respect the parking areas and use as much as possible the public transport provided by the organisation.

CIE Member

LE TRIAL ET L'ENVIRONNEMENT

Le Trial, comme toutes les disciplines moto tout-terrain, est menacé par les défenseurs les plus extrémistes de l'environnement. Pour faire face à ces attaques, tous les acteurs du Trial tels que les organisateurs, les pilotes et le public doivent se mobiliser et démontrer de façon visible un respect des règles environnementales prévues par la FIM.

Les organisateurs mettent à disposition des pilotes et du public des containers identifiés pour chaque type de déchets et des installations sanitaires que tous doivent utiliser.

Les pilotes doivent installer sous leur moto, dans le Parc des Coureurs, un tapis « environnement » étanche protégeant le sol des infiltrations d'hydrocarbure. Les motos doivent être lavées impérativement à un endroit approprié indiqué par l'organisateur et équipé de séparateur d'huile.

Le public respectera les consignes sur le respect de l'environnement données par l'organisateur. Il respectera les zones de stationnement et utilisera au maximum les transports en commun mis à disposition par l'organisation.

AUTOMATIC TEST EQUIPMENT FOR ELECTRONIC & SEMICONDUCTOR INDUSTRIES

WWW.SPEA.COM

When you buy any electronic device, you need to be sure that it works without failures. When you use an electronic device, as well, you need to be sure that it is not going to break. These are the reasons why every electronics manufacturer has to test its products at the end of the production process.

SPEA is a worldwide company leader in R&D and manufacturing of Automatic Test Equipment that are used by electronics manufacturers for their products such as microchips, wafers and electronic boards. A substantial part of the electronic products sold worldwide are tested by their producers with SPEA equipment.

discover us on

Typical parts tested by using the SPEA machines include PCs, cell phones, household appliances, Hi-Fi & TV sets, automotive, gaming, electromedical, aerospace, industrial devices.
