The World Anti-Doping Code and FIM's Anti-Doping Rules are rooted in the intrinsic value of sport, known as the "spirit of sport," which promotes the ethical pursuit of human excellence through the dedicated perfection of each riders' natural talents.

These rules aim to protect the health and safety of riders, to provide the opportunity for riders to pursue human excellence without the use of prohibited substances and methods, and uphold sport's integrity by respecting rules, competitors, fair competition, and the value of clean sport to the world.

The spirit of sport is the celebration of the human spirit, body and mind, reflecting Olympism's essence and sport's core values, including:

- Health
- Ethics, fair play and honesty
- Riders' rights as set forth in the Code
- Excellence in performance
- Character and Education
- Fun and joy
- Teamwork
- Dedication and commitment
- Respect for rules and laws
- Respect for self and other Participants
- Courage
- Community and solidarity

The spirit of sport is expressed in how we ride true. Doping is fundamentally contrary to the spirit of sport. Moreover, in motorcycling, safety is also crucial. By using any substance that can impair judgment and reactions, a rider may endanger not only their own life but also the lives of others.
